

The king and the treasure

By Armand and Raphaël

Once upon a time, there was a big castle with a king, a queen, a prince and a guard. In this castle there was a cave which was protected by a dragon because a treasure was in it. The dragon had slept for 10 years but that year a lot of terrible monsters wanted to get the treasure.

One day, the king died because a giant killed him. And, bad news, the queen died of sadness. So, the prince became the new king. The new king had to protect the treasure but a lot of monsters wanted it and a big fight started between the giant and the king. He had some allies such as the wizard and a fairy. The wizard won his fight with difficulties but the fairy died because, during the fight, the witch sent a fireball.

In the cave, the dragon finally woke up and, with the guard's help, it killed everybody with its flames. Everyone was happy because the bodies were dead or in jail and because the treasure had been saved.

People lived happily ever after.

The end.
